I. LISTENING COMPREHENSION

There will be no written text during the listening parts of the real exam; instead, you will listen to the tracks and respond appropriately to the questions.

TEXT 1

A: Have you packed everything for the hiking trip?

B: Almost. I have water and a jacket, but I haven't packed the first-aid kit.

A: Let's take some snacks too. The weather may be cold, so we should also take gloves.

TEXT 2

A: Do you still work at the library?

B: Yes. I really like it. When there aren't many visitors, I can study for my classes.

A: That sounds useful.

B: It is. The job is quiet, and I can do my homework during the quieter hours.

TEXT 3

A: How is your new course?

B: I like it a lot. The teacher is excellent, but there is a lot of reading and several assignments each week.

A: So you're happy with it?

B: Definitely, although the workload is heavier than I expected.

TEXT 4

A: Are you ready for the flight?

B: Almost. I'm not worried about the flight itself, but we have to change planes in Frankfurt. I'm afraid we might miss the connecting flight if the first plane is late.

PART 1 – UNDERSTANDING AND INTERPRETING

II. READING COMPREHENSION

TEXT 1

A Greener Way to Travel

Many cities are encouraging people to use bicycles instead of cars. Cycling can reduce traffic and air pollution, and it is also a simple way to include exercise in everyday life. Some cities have built special bicycle lanes and introduced public bike-sharing systems. These services allow people to rent a bicycle for a short journey and leave it at another station.

However, cycling is not always easy. In cities with heavy traffic, some people are afraid of accidents. Others complain that there are not enough safe bicycle lanes. Weather can also be a problem, especially during very hot or rainy periods.

Despite these difficulties, cycling has become increasingly popular. Some commuters say that cycling is faster than driving during rush hour because they do not have to wait in traffic. City authorities therefore continue to invest in safer cycling infrastructure. The aim is not to force everyone to stop using cars, but to give residents more choices about how they travel.

9. What is one benefit of cycling mentioned in the article?

- A) It makes public transport cheaper.
- B) It can reduce traffic and pollution.
- C) It guarantees safer roads.
- D) It eliminates the need for exercise.

10. Why are some people reluctant to cycle in busy cities?

- A) They think cycling is too expensive.
- B) They dislike exercising outdoors.
- C) They are concerned about accidents.
- D) They cannot find bicycles to buy.

11. What can be inferred about cycling during rush hour?

- A) It can sometimes be quicker than travelling by car.
- B) It is always slower than driving.
- C) It is impossible in large cities.
- D) It requires special public transport tickets.

TEXT 2

The Value of Learning Something New

People often associate learning with school or university, but learning does not have to stop when formal education ends. Adults can benefit from learning new skills for practical, social, and personal reasons. A person might learn to cook, use a new computer programme, play an instrument, or speak another language.

One advantage of learning a new skill is that it can increase confidence. At first, a new activity may seem difficult, but gradual improvement shows people that they are capable of dealing with challenges. Learning can also provide opportunities to meet others. For example, someone who joins a photography course may make friends with people who have similar interests.

There are, of course, obstacles. Adults are often busy with work, family responsibilities, and other commitments. They may also worry that they are too old to learn effectively. However, age alone does not prevent learning. What matters is having realistic goals, practising regularly, and being willing to make mistakes.

Another benefit is that learning can make everyday life more interesting. When people develop a new interest, they often notice things they previously ignored. A person learning photography, for instance, may begin to pay more attention to light, colour, and buildings. In this way, learning changes not only what people can do but also how they see the world.

For these reasons, adults should not think of learning as something that belongs only to young people. Even a small amount of regular practice can lead to meaningful progress. The important thing is to choose something useful or enjoyable and give yourself enough time to improve.

12. Which is NOT mentioned as a possible reason for adults to learn?

- A) Practical purposes.
- B) Social reasons.
- C) Personal reasons.
- D) Becoming famous.

13. What obstacle do adults commonly face?

- A) They have too many holidays.
- B) They have work and family responsibilities.
- C) They dislike all new activities.
- D) They cannot make mistakes.

14. What is important for successful learning according to the article?

- A) Having unrealistic goals.
- B) Practising only when motivated.
- C) Setting realistic goals and practising regularly.
- D) Avoiding difficult activities.

15. What is the writer's main purpose?

- A) To argue that adults can benefit from continuing to learn.
- B) To explain why formal education is necessary.
- C) To compare schools and universities.
- D) To describe one particular photography course.
